INTRODUCTION TO SERIALS AND E-RESOURCES TODAY

(To access full text, replace asterisks with final set of digits shown in DOI references below)

eJournals

Digital research / analog publishing – one scientist’s view, Philip E Bourne, Serials, 24(2), July 2011, 119-122 (DOI: 10.1629/24119)

Access to scholarly content: gaps and barriers to access, Ian Rowlands, Serials, 24(2), July 2011, 123-130 (DOI: 10.1629/24123)

E-pricing models: are publishers and librarians on the same page?, Melinda Kenneway, Serials, 24(2), July 2011, 173-177 (DOI: 10.1629/24173)

Societies and online journal models, Andrew Robinson, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 56-59 (DOI: 10.1629/2456)

Reassessing the value proposition: first steps towards a fair(er) price for scholarly journals, David C Prosser, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 60-63 (DOI: 10.1629/2460)

Librarians and the terrible fix: economics of the big deal, Theodore C Bergstrom, Serials, 23(3), July 2010, 77-82 (DOI: 10.1629/2377)

Peer review in a changing world – preliminary findings of a global study, Adrian Mulligan and Ellen Raphael, Serials, 23 (1), March 2010, 25-34 (DOI: 10.1629/2325)

‘To every thing there is a season’: reflections on the sustainability of the ‘big deal’ in the current economic climate, Jill Taylor-Roe, Serials, 22(2), July 2009, 113-121 (DOI: 10.1629/22113)

The UKSG TRANSFER Project: collaboration to improve access to content, Ed Pentz and Louise Cole Serials, 22(2), July 2009, 161-165 (DOI: 10.1629/22161)

Can we subscribe to this please?: realising a core journal collection for the University of Sussex, Jane Harvell, Serials, 21(3), November 2008, 178-182 (DOI: 10.1629/21178)

eBooks

E-pricing models: are publishers and librarians on the same page?, Melinda Kenneway, Serials, 24(2), July 2011, 173-177 (DOI: 10.1629/24173)
Evolving expectations and scholarly e-books, Alison Jones, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 12-16 (DOI: 10.1629/2412)

Infrastructure first! E-books and academic libraries in Sweden, Anders Söderbäck, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 38-42 (DOI: 10.1629/2438)

Models for e-book purchase in UK further education, Anna Vernon, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 48-51 (DOI: 10.1629/2448)

‘Just in case’ vs. ‘Just in time’: e-book purchasing models, Steve Sharp and Sarah Thompson, Serials, 23(3), November 2010, 201-205 (DOI: 10.1629/23201)

User-driven purchasing: a pilot project to test an alternative pricing model for Springer e-book collections, Sarah Thompson, Serials, 23(2), July 2010, 135-139 (DOI: 10.1629/23135)

E-books and user assumptions, Aline Soules, Serials. 22(3) supplement, November 2009, S1-S5 (DOI: 10.1629/22S1)

Nudging the envelope: the hard road to mainstreaming UCD Library e-book provision, Rosalind Pan et al, Serials, 22(3) supplement, November 2009, S12-S22 (DOI: 10.1629/22S12)

Ten years on: e-books at the University of Auckland Library, Ksenija Mincic-Obradovic, Serials, 22(3), November 2009, S23-S29 (DOI: 10.1629/22S23)

Patron-driven, librarian-approved: a pay-per-view model for e-books, Susan Macicak and Lindsey E Schnell, Serials, 22(3) supplement, November 2009, S31-S37 (DOI: 10.1629/22S31)

JISC national e-books observatory: initial findings from the project and how we might use them, Lorraine Estelle and Caren Milloy, Serials, 22(2), July 2009, 104-107 (DOI: 10.1629/22104)

Long-term access

Portico Holdings Comparison Service: are we really insured?, Alison Neil, Serials, 22(2), July 2009, 174-177 (DOI: 10.1629/22174)

PEER: a European project to monitor the effects of widespread open access archiving of journal articles, Peter T Shepherd and Julia M Wallace, Serials, 22(1), March 2009, 19-23 (DOI: 10.1629/2219)

Piloting an e-journals preservation registry service (PEPRS), Peter Burnhill, Serials, 22(1), March 2009, 53-59 (DOI: 10.1629/2253)

eResource use / user behaviour

Researchers of Tomorrow Study, Hazel Woodward, Serials, 23(3), November 2010, 226-227 (DOI: 10.1629/23226)

‘Real challenges in a virtual world’, or ‘Can I get full text from ERIC and what on earth is Dialog or Datastar?’, Philippa Sheail, Serials, 23(2), July 2010, 103-108 (DOI: 10.1629/23103)

A personal perspective on accessing academic information in the Google era, or ‘How I learned to stop worrying and love Google’, Claire Duddy, Serials, 22(2), July 2009, 131-135 (DOI: 10.1629/22131)

The information-seeking behaviour of the virtual scholar: from use to users, David Nicholas, Serials, 21(2), July 2008, 89-92 (DOI: 10.1629/2189)

Resource management

Agent 3.0 – a shared service provider, David Main, Serials, 24(2), July 2011, 166-169 (DOI: 10.1629/24166)

What’s the buzz about Library Choice?, Sarah Durrant, Serials 24(2), July 2011, 170-172 (DOI: 10.1629/24170)

IESR: promoting use of academic e-resources in the UK, Charlie Rapple and Jo Lambert, Serials, 23(2), July 2010, 163-165 (DOI: 10.1629/23163)

An introduction to the JISC Academic Database Assessment Tool, Liam Earney, Serials, 22(3), November 2009, 199-205 (DOI: 10.1629/22199)

Repositories and research output

Advice on filling your repository, Arthur Sale, Serials, 23(3), November 2010, 207-211 (DOI: 10.1629/23207)

Achieving an ‘enlightened’ publications policy at the University of Glasgow, Morag Greig, Serials, 22(1), March 2009, 7-11 (DOI: 10.1629/227)

A UK Research Data Service (UKRDS): the way forward for research data management, John Milner, Serials, 22(1), March 2009, 83-85 (DOI: 10.1629/2283)

Open access

Access to scholarly content: gaps and barriers to access, Ian Rowlands, Serials, 24(2), July 2011, 123-130 (DOI: 10.1629/24123)

Heading for the open road: costs and benefits of transitions in scholarly communications, Mark Ware, Serials, 24(2), July 2011, 130-132

The need and drive for open data in biomedical publishing, Iain Hrynaszkiewicz, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 31-37 (DOI: 10.1629/2431)

Big HE – a shining vision or the apocalypse?, Mark Stiles, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 84-88 (DOI: 10.1629/2484)

New models for monographs – open books, Eelco Ferwerda, Serials, 23(2), July 2010, 91-96 (DOI: 10.1629/2391)

Paved with gold: an institutional study on supporting open access publishing, Jill Russell and Tracy Kent, Serials, 23(2), July 2010, 97-102 (DOI: 10.1629/2397)

‘The law is the true embodiment of everything that’s excellent’: mandates – a view from the United States, Ann Okerson, Serials, 22(1), March 2009, 12-18 (DOI: 10.1629/2212)

PEER: a European project to monitor the effects of widespread open access archiving of journal articles, Peter T Shepherd and Julia M Wallace, Serials, 22(1), March 2009, 19-23 (DOI: 10.1629/2219)

Learned societies and open access: key results from surveys of bioscience societies and researchers, Sue Thorn et al, Serials, 22(1), March 2009, 39-47 (DOI: 10.1629/2239)
Mini-profiles (careers)

A day in the life of a government research advisor, Claire Duddy, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 93-94 (DOI: 10.1629/2493)

A day in the life of a digital preservation initiative director, Victoria Reich, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 95-97 (DOI: 10.1629/2495)

A day in the Twitter life of a library systems manager, Dave Pattern, Serials, 24(1), March 2011, 98-99 (DOI: 10.1629/2498)

A day in the life of a marketing director, Emily Gillingham, Serials, 23(3), November 2010, 179-181 (DOI: 10.1629/23179)

A day in the life of a serials and e-resources librarian, Hildegard Schaffler, 23(2), July 2010, 73-74 (DOI: 10.1629/2373)

A day in the life of a consortium manager, Tom Sanville, Serials, 23(2), July 2010, 75-76 (DOI: 10.1629/2375)

A day in the life of a medical editor / clinician, Charles Young, Serials, 23(1), March 2010, 2-3 (DOI: 10.1629/232)

A day in the life of a health sciences library director, Jean Shipman, Serials, 23(1), March 2010, 4-5 (DOI: 10.1629/234)

A day in the life of an e-publishing business development executive, Barbara Kaplan, Serials, 22(3), November 2009, 194-195 (DOI: 10.1629/22194)

A day in the life of a scholarly information consultant, Sarah Durrant, Serials, 22(3), November 2009, 196-198 (DOI: 10.1629/22194)

A day in the life of a director of library relations, Bruce, Heterick, Serials, 22(1), March 2009, 2-4 (DOI: 10.1629/222)

A day in the life of a product manager, Kirsty Meddings, Serials, 22(1), March 2009, 5-6 (DOI: 10.1629/2225)

A day in the life of an iSchool associate professor, Joseph Janes, Serials, 21(3), November 2008, 162-163 (DOI: 10.1629/21162)

A day in the life of an electronic resources librarian, Paula Younger, Serials, 21(3), November 2008, 164-166 (DOI: 10.1629/21164)