At Oxford University Press, everything we do furthers the University of Oxford's objective of excellence in research, scholarship, and education by publishing worldwide. We are the world's largest university press and have the widest global presence, with products sold in around 200 countries and regions, in over 85 languages. During our 500-year history, we have evolved the development and delivery of our world-class content, working with educators and the scholarly community to find new ways to make information accessible.

Through our publishing and services, our charitable work, and our dedicated global team, we change people's lives through education and research.

The archive of music journalism!

Rock's Backpages is the World's most comprehensive online database of music writing, a unique resource unavailable elsewhere online. It contains an ever-expanding collection of primary-source full-text articles from the music and mainstream press from the 1950s to the present day, along with a collection of exclusive audio interviews.

There are more than 55,000 thousand articles on the site, with 60 new articles added weekly. These feature over six thousand artists and range from 500-word album (or concert) reviews to 10,000-word interviews and features, and over 850 previously unpublished, audio interviews with major music artists.

Sage is a global academic publisher of books, journals, and library resources with a growing range of technologies to enable discovery, access, and engagement. Believing that research and education are critical in shaping society, 24-year-old Sara Miller McCune founded Sage in 1965. Today, we are controlled by a group of trustees charged with maintaining our independence and mission indefinitely.

Our guaranteed independence means we're:

- Free to do more – supporting an equitable academic future, furthering disciplines that drive social change, and helping social and behavioral science make an impact.
- Free to work together – building lasting relationships, championing diverse perspectives, and co-creating resources to transform teaching and learning.
- Free to think long-term – experimenting, taking risks, and investing in new ideas.

Subscribe to Open Community of Practice

Stand No: 4 & 7

Contact: Laura Simonite

Email: simonite@ems.press

Website: <https://subscribetoopencommunity.org/>

Subscribe to Open (S2O) is a pragmatic approach for converting subscription journals to open access—free and immediate online availability of research—without reliance on either article processing charges (APCs) or altruism. S2O relies on existing library subscription procurement processes. The model provides a realistic and immediate route to opening a vast body of research output that would otherwise remain gated. The Subscribe to Open Community of Practice aims to promote and disseminate best practices to support all stakeholders in implementing the principles of S2O (with room for variation in each offer). Our goal is to build consensus around S2O as a sustainable mechanism for achieving open access.

The Social History Archive contains billions of records and newspapers covering every aspect of the people, places and events that have shaped our world. Enrich your institution's academic resources with access to a huge and growing collection of primary source material, from unique newspaper content to census returns, crime reports and migration records. Empower research and learning with easy-to-search content that offers an unrivalled insight into the real lives of the British and Irish population over time.

Cultural and technological change: Track how society shifted from census to census, the Suffragette cause, Trade Union development, game-changing advances of the 1920s and more.

War, peace and politics: Service records and newspapers reveal the stories and statistics behind both World Wars, the struggle for Irish independence, Napoleonic battles and every major conflict of the past three centuries.

Migration trends: Original passenger lists, passport applications and naturalisation records combine to highlight the people on the move generations ago, their origins, journeys and final destinations.

Religious movements: From Catholicism to Quakers, the largest online collection of British and Irish church records can help to piece together the importance of faith down the decades.

Third Iron's LibKey technology reinvents linking from the ground up. Using article-level intelligence and expert-AI source selection, LibKey delivers the fastest, most reliable, and informed linking to full text. LibKey helps libraries avoid common barriers to access such as broken links, confusing link resolver menus, and forced authentication to Open Access articles. Avoiding linking to retracted articles, or articles published in problematic journals, are additional benefits of LibKey. Moreover, with precise understanding of Open Access status, LibKey connects users to version of record OA articles published in subscription hybrid journals, even if the library does not subscribe to the journals.
